James

Fenton

Commemoration

James Fenton, historian and author of three books (The History of Tasmania, Bush Life in Tasmania fifty Years ago and The life of the Rev Charles Price) died at his residence, 69 Balfour St, Launceston on 24 June 1901. He was buried in the Charles St Cemetery, (now Ockerby Gardens). He arrived in Hobart from Ireland in 1834 and went to live at Forth in 1840. He was the first settler in the Central Coast region. The North West Region of the National Trust has organised a commemoration on Sunday 24 June, the centenary of his death. The program for the day is as follows:

10.00 am Talk on Fenton by Peter Mercer and display of Fenton material at Ulverstone Local History Museum then

Travel to Forth to visit the various sites where Fenton lived including "Lenna", his last residence at the Forth.

1.30 pm Launch of the Fenton Commemorative Volume, (published by members of the Fenton family), MacKillop centre, William St, Forth. While the book consists largely of a reprint of a series of articles written by Fenton, titled "Old Times" and published in The North West Post in the latter part of 1892 and early 1893, it also includes other relevant material.

3.00 pm Unveiling of a commemorative cairn at Forth. The cairn incorporates part of Fenton's headstone, from the Charles St Cemetery, which was salvaged by members of the Fenton family.

Persons wishing to attend should make their own arrangements for lunch and transport.
